New Zealand Post Services Resume After Canterbury Earthquake, but Backlog Continues

March 2, 2011

New Zealand Post services that have been affected by the Canterbury earthquake resumed on March 1st primarily to the northern and western areas of Christchurch; however, it could reportedly take three more weeks for the backlog of mail in Christchurch to be cleared. While it is voluntary for New Zealand Post staff to work, roughly 90% are showing up to their jobs. New Zealand Post has found that crews are only able to reach about 60% of the city. The most significant problems are in the south and east of the city.

For more information and updates regarding the effects of the earthquake on postal services, please refer to the following news release directly from the New Zealand Post: <http://www.nzpost.co.nz/about-us/media-centre/new-zealand-post-services-affected-by-canterbury-earthquake>
