Volcano Update, Most Flights Moving Normally April 23, 2010

While the Icelandic volcano is still active, the latest reports indicate that Europe's airspace is almost completely free of ash today and flights have been proceeding normally, with the exception of Iceland. Shifting winds have blown the ash toward Iceland's capital, Reykjavik, forcing Trans-Atlantic flights that normally stop in Iceland to be rerouted through Glasgow in Scotland. Despite the resumption of flights, there is still a backlog of international mail that may result in some continued delivery delays through next week. We will continue to monitor this situation, and will provide our customers with updates as they become available.
