Royal Mail Strikes Suspended Until After Holidays

November 5, 2009

The UK postal strikes have been temporarily suspended until at least the New Year in order to provide the Royal Mail and the Communication Workers Union a “period of calm” for fresh talks in an effort to reach a long-term deal. While both sides are still in disagreement over many of the issues, this decision to postpone any action will allow the Royal Mail to begin clearing the backlog resulting from recent strikes and provide service over the holidays that will remain free from disruption. For additional details on the dispute and any current delays, please visit Royal Mail Service Updates.

Brokers Worldwide will continue to collect UK-bound mail from our customers. Although the mail will reach the UK in the same amount of time as before, mail services within the UK will be subject to delay while the Royal Mail works to clear the current backlog. Brokers Worldwide will continue to monitor this situation, and will provide our customers with updates as they become available.
